<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Great class to learn how to think critically. • Great teacher expands thought process for puzzles • This is a kind of class I was looking for. Brain training, thinking about logics, rather than focusing on my grade and do homeworks that sometimes takes over my elective course. Every class, I had to stay focused to follow the course, it requires a lot of focus which was a good training for me. • This was my last class in SAIC before graduating BFA, and I'm so glad I chose it because it is the best class ever. This class definitely was one of the most intense thinking processes I've been through in my life. Prepare to get a headache and receive the reward of logic! • amazing teacher, challenging course, you leave feeling very accomplished, and to be honest not too much outside of class work which is pretty nice..

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Pretty hard in class questions, but really rewarding when solving them. • Although most of the problems were too challenging for me to solve, John explained to me easily • not challenging in a way where you're stressed out and have too much to do and you're proud that you made it through without having a mental breakdown... it's challenging in a way where you push yourself to work and think in ways you wouldn't generally think to, or even know you could.

• definitely a great environment for discussions. everyone is made to feel like their input is welcome and beneficial (john would probably respond to this by saying "because it is"). But, it was sometimes hard to get the discussion flowing because some of the exercises were hard to grasp-- and john is very intent on having the class figure out as much of it as possible before he steps in.

• he really cares about his students. Love this teacher.
 • Great teacher, helps you when you are stuck.
 • It was a less stressful but challenging class.
 • A true logician, philosopher, and genius.
 • John is the best guys. he's really smart and knows what he's talking about, he's very engaged in what he's teaching and how. he's also very understanding of the different paces students work at while still being able to maintain an overall structure to the course that all students can follow together.
